Glasgow Art Fair under way

Legs be havin' you!

GALLERY owner Rebecca Hossack hardly looks head over heels with this exhibit at the Glasgow Art Fair.

The work – called Head In The Clouds – is one of thousands of exhibits at the 10th annual event, which is being staged from today until Monday.

Rebecca, who owns an established London gallery, is one of 53 gallery owners exhibiting the work of more than 1500 artists in marquees at George Square.

Glasgow Art Fair is now firmly established as the largest fair outside London, attracting 18,000 visitors. Last year, more than £1million of art work was sold.

Lord Provost Liz Cameron said: "The Glasgow Art Fair is Scotland's national art fair, and its continued success is testament to Glasgow's strong reputation as an important centre for the visual arts."
