Five of the Best Hidden London Art Galleries

By Sara D'souza | Posted: Thursday 22 March 2012

Rebecca Hossack

After opening her first London gallery in 1988, influential Australian art dealer Rebecca Hossack has gone on to firmly establish herself on the art scene with two beautifully curated galleries in Fitzrovia that regularly feature works from little-known artists. Firstly, there's a very bijoux gallery in Charlotte Street, which currently has an exhibition on that ELLEuk thoroughly recommends: Ian Penny's 'From here and there', a series of large, painstakingly intricate and wonderfully whimsical hand-cut pieces that each reflect the natural world. The second gallery is over on Conway Street and up until March 31st is showing work that falls under the theme of landscapes, from the artists of the Gilchrist-Fisher Award.
